Brighton Cabinets

are crafted from the finest quality wood ranging from traditional Maple, Cherry, Oak, Hickory, and Rustic Alder to contemporary Lyptus and painted finishings. Each wood brings its own unique characteristics to our variety of cabinet styles.

Maple

A smooth, close-grain wood, primarily white in color. Random rays of wood grain outlined with small darker lines may be present. Small black dots, or bird's eyes, and black mineral traces are another touch of nature. Maple takes on a golden hue as it ages.

Cherry

Color ranges from white to deep brown. Exposure to light deepens the color, turning it to a dark, reddish brown in the darker areas and to shades from yellow to brown in the light areas. These natural changes should be expected.

Rustic Alder

Faded yellow to light brown in color, rustic alder appears somewhat uniform with sound whole knots and cut knots.

Oak

A strong, open grained wood with color ranging from salmon to white. Accents of green, yellow, or black through the surface indicate mineral deposits absorbed during the tree's growth. Worm holes, knots, and wild grain patterns serve as nature's fingerprints.

Hickory

A strong and varied grain wood. In a light finish, the color ranges from white to dark chocolate brown. Random knots and worm holes add even more character to its natural beauty.

Lyptus

A strong and varied grain wood, with medium texture and occasional color streaks. Light finishes reveal a color range from pink to reddish brown. Contrasting shades of red and brown is one of its natural characteristics. When exposed to light, Lyptus darkens in color. Lyptus is grown in renewable plantations, helping to protect the environment.

Painted Cabinets

Combine the beauty of wood with the clean look of a painted finish. Over time, the wood naturally expands and contracts, while the painted finish may develop hairline cracks, most noticeable in the joint areas. This is a result of the genuine hardwoods used in our products' manufacture; it should not detract from the cabinet's beauty.

Finishes

By combining a variety of finishes with the natural characteristics found in wood, Brighton Cabinetry, Inc. creates the appearance desired by today's discriminating homeowner.

Each order will become a unique yet functional work of art through the selection of a balanced combination of species, finish, and profile.

Visit our website at www.brightoncabinetry.com to browse through our gallery of finishes and color options that are available in each of our six species of wood.
